FIVE MEN HELD IN PULASKI DOUBLE MURDER

Officer West Is Given Seven Years By Jury

STEWART'S CASE IS 'CONTINUED,' WEST TO APPEAL VERDICT

Decision Of Guilty Of Manslaughter Is Reported Today

BONDS ARE FIXED IN CIRCUIT COURT

Courtroom Stilled As Jury Files In With Written Edict

Sentence of seven years, following conviction on a charge of first degree manslaughter, was assessed by the jury reporting on the case of J. Monroe West, Albany officer, this morning at 9:30 o'clock. The case of Robert E. Stewart, Albany officer, held in connection with the death of Asberry Murry, was continued and Stewart granted $5,000 bail. Officer West's appeal bond was fixed at $10,000.

As state and defense lawyers moved about court routine early today, selecting a jury for the Robert E. Stewart case, Will Duncan, bailiff in charge of the West jury, announced the jury ready to report.

The courtroom was stilled as the jury filed in, faces unshaven and with expressions about tired eyes as they took their places facing Judge E.

he court asked if they had reached agreement. R. Hansford King, man, replying that they had and, adding the jury finding to J. L. Apter, circuit court clerk.

An intense moment followed as Mr. Apter read the decision, "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty of first degree manslaughter and assess punishment at seven years in the penitentiary." No emotion was perceptible in the defendant as the verdict was rendered, seated as he was with his counsel, Attorneys John R. Sample and G. O. Chenault, Attorneys Rice and Griffith not being seated at the defense table.

The courtroom was immediately in stir, followed by the order from Judge Kyle reminding attendants and admonished jurors that court was still in session.

Defense and state attorneys conferred, determining the status of the Stewart case and agreeing on a continuance with bail granted in the sum of $5,000.

Judge Kyle arraigned the defendant West to pass sentence upon him.

he asked if the defendant knew any reason why sentence should not be passed at this time, the answer was almost inaudible as the defendant shook his head in the negative. Judge Kyle then approved the recommendation of the jury, sentencing the Albany officer to a seven year term.

The West case will go to the court of appeals provided the bond is approved. Amount of the appeal bond was placed at $10,000.

Special jurors were dismissed for the term, regular jurors being instructed to return Thursday morning at 8:30 o'clock.

Farming Starts In South Section

Farmers have already started preparation for the 1926 crop yield, according to W. R. Teague, resident from the southern part of Morgan county who was in The Daily office today. He declared farmers are hampered somewhat with the changeable weather, but said that most of the agricultural class look forward to a fine crop year.

PLANS CONCLUDED FOR CONFERENCE STATE OLDER BOYS

More Than 200 Are Expected To Arrive For Sessions

NOTABLES TO ADDRESS BOYS

Committees Express Appreciation For Assistance

Plans and program were concluded today for the Older Boy's Conference to be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday of the present week in Albany-Decatur, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. Approximately 250 out-of-town boys are expected to arrive for the opening of the conference tomorrow.

Notable speakers from over the state have been selected to address the boys at various gatherings. Entertainment features provided for the boys are included in the three day session.

All committees have done exceedingly well with pre-meeting arrangements. The homes committee, headed by D. W. Speake and the banquet committee of women with Mrs. Vera Austelle as chairman, have concluded arrangements and today expressed appreciation for the splendid support and co-operation that has been given between churches, homes and merchants in making the event a success.

TWO AIR OFFICERS FACE REPRIMANDS

Majors Found Guilty Of Activity In Propaganda

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Majors H. H. Arnold and H. A. Dargue, army air service, have been found responsible for "objectionable activities" in attempting to influence air service legislation and will be reprimanded.

Findings resulted from an investigation ordered by Secretary of War Davis, following distribution of circulars urging support for air service legislation, favored by Major General Patrick.

Major Arnold is information officer in General Patrick's office, and the general, who has been given authority to administer the discipline, found him most culpable and announced he would be sent to duty outside of Washington.

Major Dargue is chief of the war plans division of the air service.

In announcing his findings, General Patrick issued a statement replying to intimations in congress and elsewhere that the investigation was really intended by the war department to force him out of the service. In his belief, he said, "there was absolutely no foundation of fact for any such nonsensical statement."

Decatur Man Claims Cash Birmingham Resident Left

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, Feb. 17.—More than 40 citizens of Chilton and Morgan counties are in Birmingham today to testify in a case pending before Judge William M. Walwer in the chancery division of circuit court.

The amount involved is small, but the circumstances attending the case make it of unusual interest.

Willie Lawhorn, a resident of Birmingham, died on August 1, 1923, leaving an estate appraised at $5,400, nearly all of which was in cash, and left no will. Two weeks later, Cross Terrell, claiming to be an uncle, qualified in the probate judge's office as administrator of the estate by executing a bond for $10,800.

Subsequently George W. Lawhorn, of Decatur, Ala., filed a claim against the estate, asserting he was the father of the deceased, and still later a number of other persons entered their appearances with claims of blood relationship.

George W. Lawhorn's claim that he was the father of Willie Lawhorn is denied by the administrator. It is asserted that George W. Lawhorn was separated from his wife and child in Chilton county about the year 1884 and that his whereabouts thereafter was unknown to them or to other relatives and friends.

Mrs. Lawhorn died several years ago and Willie Lawhorn never married.

Cross Terrell, as next of kin, is claiming the estate.

The case was set for a hearing in chancery court, to which it has been transferred from the probate court, at 10 o'clock but on account of other action, then on trial, it went over until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

MOTHER AND SIX CHILDREN BURNED

An Overheated Stove Is Believed To Have Caused Blaze

(Associated Press)

CENTRAL BRIDGE, N. Y., Feb. 17.—Mrs. Elizabeth Teale, 29, and six of her children, were burned to death when fire destroyed their apartment over a barber shop early today.

The father, Edward Teale, suffered two broken arms and the oldest child a daughter, 14, was uninjured.

The fire is believed to have been caused by an overheated stove or a defective chimney. The flames spread to adjoining buildings before the fire was brought under control.

Tickets Are Good Two Afternoons

Merchants tickets, admitting persons to local theaters, are good at the Star theater this afternoon from 2 to 6 o'clock and at the Delite theater Thursday between the same hours. Through an error appearing in the theater advertisement on Tuesday afternoon it was announced in a part of the Daily city edition that merchants tickets were good at the Princess theater this afternoon. The Daily had omitted the word "Star" before the word "theater," leaving the reader to believe that the tickets were good at the Princess theater where there is a special added attraction. The Daily regrets this error and takes full responsibility. The tickets are not good at the Princess theater this afternoon.

FORMER RESIDENT DEEDS HOUSE AND LOTS TO HOSPITAL

Henry B. Scott Donates Property Here To Institution

MORE BIG GIFTS ARE ANNOUNCED

Greater Interest Being Shown Now By The Committees

REPORTS ASKED

Team captains are due to make reports today for the hospital fund, at campaign headquarters. Ladies at 3:30, men at 7:30 p. m.

The director states that as the end approaches momentum is increasing and the public response seems to be more general.

Another former resident of the Twin Cities had come to the front in aid of Benevolent hospital. Henry B. Scott, now of Atlanta, Georgia, has contributed a house and three vacant lots to be sold and the proceeds to be turned over to the hospital to erect a memorial.

Mrs. E. H. Allison herself one of the most generous contributors to the fund, was instrumental in bringing the needs of the hospital before Mr. Scott. His response was immediate and generous.

The property the hospital thus acquires is located as follows, house and lot on Sixth avenue South, rented for $15.00 a month, a lot on South Highlands and two lots on Sherman street east of Somerville road.

Says Mr. Scott in his letter to Mrs. Allison, "It seems to me that some public spirited man who would like to do something for the hospital without costing him anything could take over the property and let the proceeds be applied to the building of the Scott Memorial. You can report it as a contribution from me for what it is worth, and in so doing I will feel that the little property I have left in Albany could not be used for a better purpose."

More Gifts Announced

As the windup of the campaign approaches more donations are announced from public spirited and wealthy individuals and concerns: Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Bowles, combining their donation of $1,200 with the $1,200 of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Cortner will erect the women's ward. W. R. Spight for Brock and Spight, the Home Oil company and himself has added $1,500. Mrs. J. H. Calvin $1,000, the Twin City Bread Co., gave $500, B. L. Malone, $400, Ben Martin, for the Quality Laundry, $300 besides the subscriptions of his workers, and his family.

Space does not permit of a detailed list of other contributions from business and private individuals. Many of those who have already subscribed volunteered further help if the people of the Twin Cities would do their share by proving in the number of pledges they give, that the general public is standing by the appeal and holding its own.

The shop committees consisting of the following leaders and others, commenced work today: Thos. Hodson, Percy Parker, Claude McMillan, Hiram Roberts, Albert Roberts, F. M.

HIS CONDITION NOT SERIOUS

Executive Seeks More Rest In Effort To Regain Health

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—President Coolidge, after a brief stay today in his office, returned to his living quarters in the white house, to seek relief from a heavy cold.

The President conferred during the morning with Chairman Madden, of the house appropriations committee and received a call from Ambassador Riano, of Spain. He then cancelled other engagements for the day.

The President appeared at his desk at the usual time and transacted business demanding his immediate attention. He has suffered for a long time with a nasal trouble and has taken regular treatment for it.

White house officials did not consider the cold, which he has contracted, as serious, but said it could be more quickly dissipated if more rest was afforded him.

Colbert County Citizen May Have Been Victim of Guards

(Associated Press)

TUSCUMBIA, Ala., Feb. 17.—Sheriff Henry Cobb, accompanied by physicians, went to Town Creek cemetery today to exhume the body of Hoots Taylor, Colbert county youth, who died recently in an Alabama convict camp, ten days after he had begun serving a 10-year sentence.

J. W. Taylor, father of the youth, yesterday made formal complaint that his son was beaten to death in the camp. An immediate exhumation was ordered.

A general investigation into recent deaths of convicts at Alabama mines, operated by convict labor, is being conducted by Attorney General Harwell Davis, following the filing of complaint.

J. W. Taylor yesterday asked that an investigation be conducted into the death of his son. Announcement by the Attorney General also indicated a grand jury investigation will be asked into the death of James Knox West Virginian, who died in a convict camp in August, 1924.

He said efforts had been made to frustrate his inquiry in the case. Mr. Taylor in his complaint filed with Sheriff Cobb, charged that his son was beaten to death by two negro trustees, who had been ordered to punish him. Prison records showed Taylor died of heart trouble, but Mr. Taylor said his son had never been troubled with his heart.

He requested an exhumation of the boy's body to determine, if possible, what caused his death.

MECHANIC ALLEGED TO HAVE CONFESSED, IMPLICATING OTHERS

All Are Spirited Away To Nashville Jail For Safety

MORE ARRESTS HINTED TODAY

Trail Of Bloodhounds Causes Capture Of Young West

(Associated Press)

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 17.—Manuel West, young Pulaski mechanic, Anthony and Dave Johns, brothers, and share croppers in Giles county, John Brymer, a Giles county dairyman, and Joe Adkins, are in jail here in connection with the murder of Policeman George Dodson and G. A. (Bud) Jackson, at Pulaski early Tuesday morning.

West was taken into custody Tuesday morning when the Nashville bloodhounds followed a trail to the bed in his home, where he lay sleeping and two warrants against him, charging murder, were decided on late yesterday in spite of his repeated denials.

En route to Nashville, to escape possible mob violence, he is accredited with making a confession implicating the four other men.

Anthony Johns and Brymer were arrested last night by Sheriff Glen Nelson of Giles county, and spirited away to Lewisburg and thence to this city.

The arrest of Dave Johns and Adkins was made shortly before midnight. They also were taken through Lewisburg to Nashville.

Sheriff Nelson, of Giles county, indicated early this morning that another arrest and possibly others would occur.

Confession Alleged

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 17.—Manuel West, 25 of Pulaski, Tenn., confessed his part in the killing of two Pulaski policemen. Bud Jackson and George Dodson, and named four alleged accomplices, as he was being sped to Nashville from possible mob violence late Tuesday.

The confession was made to Ed Pugh, Davidson county deputy sheriff.

Pugh, his son, Russell, and the prisoner were speeding out of Lewisburg, Tenn., en route to the county jail here. West had never broken his silence, save to deny implication in the twin killing that awakened the little town shortly after 1 o'clock Tuesday morning.

A car going in the other direction passed the trio. The driver leaned out and looked in Pugh's car.

"I'll bet they have carried him to town," West let his tongue slip.

"Carried who to town?" Pugh asked.

It was then that West, a gunsmith retracted his denials, the deputy declared and gave the names of the band, one of whom had been shot by one of the dying policemen.

The man driving the car which had passed them was a brother to the wounded fugitive. Two other men were on the back seat, but West had not scanned them minutely enough, in the fleeting seconds when the cars met to know if the two were the others he had named as his confederates.

The names of the other four men are being withheld by officials. All Nashville hospitals were being searched Tuesday night for the wounded one, though it is thought that he was taken to some place of seclusion rather than to a public institution.

She stopped him instantly. "That's splendid!" It was quite as if she were complimenting him on some new triumph within his profession. She reached over and patted his hand and then pressed it for a moment in her own. "That's splendid," she repeated. "Now you're at least a coward no longer. You see I've got a funny mind, I think. I like to know things. It helps me make plans."

"But, Jo—there's much more to say. It isn't just like that—Shall I marry you? No. There's more." "There really isn't," she declared. "You explained quite fully, without words, what you came down from London that matters were quite the same as ever. You'd got on, but I hadn't. I was just the same jazz girl with the short skirts and a lot of knees and a good time brain. Not the kind of a wife for the great creator of a beautiful thing for future generations to marvel at. Why tell me all over again?"

He knew she was mocking him, and he realized that he was helpless. A thousand things hung on his lips. In her calm scrutiny of him they jumbled. She reached to him again and patted his sleeve. "We'll have a drink over it all, someday," she said. "Meanwhile I shall stop drinking all of my cocktails to you. Now go along into the house. You will find Yvonne in the reading room. I'm going to have one of Teddy Dorminster's horses saddled and ride over for tea with Roddy Kenilworth at his house."

She gave him her hand and smiled up at him. "You will not be seeing much of me now until the fall," she said. "It is so near and I have so much to do. But I shall want you to dance with me that night. By then we shall have both forgot today."

She watched him until he disappeared beyond some shrubbery that cut off the view of the house. Then she turned toward the stables, but had not gone far when she stopped. She stood for a moment looking about her. When she saw that none of the workmen nor attendants were near, she crumpled onto the lawn, and lay, face buried in the grass, her shoulders shaking convulsively.

CHAPTER XXX

Joanna's Decision

A stable groom fumbled with his cap when Joanna had chosen her horse and sent to the house for the riding togs into which she proposed to change in the stable dressing room. The man gazed dubiously down the Cap Martin slope and estimated the thickening blanket of violet haze.

"It'll be coming up fast, Mademoiselle, after a while," he said. "It's troublesome to ride through when it gets too heavy. I shouldn't advise Mademoiselle to go too far."

"Just along the sea road, to Mr. Kenilworth's," she informed him. "The lights there are never lost."

The groom would have liked to voice more insistent caution, but his mistress was abrupt with him. There were times when the servants at Villa Amette were afraid of their Mademoiselle Joanna. The groom shook his head but decided not to venture a further protest. He reflected that, after all, she was a good horsewoman and that a horse usually is dependable.

Kenilworth, whose villa nestled at the base of the hill, shut off from the majestic boulevard which skirts the shore by a dense hedge of semi-tropical bush, met her, with his own groom, at his gate. She stepped lightly from his hand to the ground and tossed her bride to the man. "Just an hour, please," she commanded.

Kenilworth immediately expressed dismay. "You haven't braved the mist to give me but an hour! It will take me quite that long to get accustomed to the vision of you among my things."

"Just an hour, Roddy," she insisted, nodding to the groom who accepted her order as final and led the horse away. "You see I've made plans for the evening, and I mustn't interfere with them. I shall have to get back to Amette and change."

It was the first time Joanna had granted Kenilworth a "tote hour" in the midst of his things, as he expressed it. She had always made a pretense of "being afraid" of him, which, he customarily retorted, was flattering but untrue. He assured her, at such times, that she was one who wouldn't be afraid of anybody. He had desperately proposed Lady Weymouth as a chaperone, but with no success. Joanna asserted that she'd never resort to a chaperone—"in these days." He was, then, puzzled by the sudden whim which brought her, uninvited, and strangely vibrant. He knew her well enough to sense a purpose. Joanna, he had discovered long ago, usually concealed a purpose behind whatever was unexpected of her. He had made a profession, almost, of discovering those hidden purposes and fathoming them.

"Confess to me," she challenged him when she had settled in a great chair before the log fire, which baffled the cool dampness of the increasing mist outside. "You are wondering why I came so unexpectedly."

"That I wouldn't do," he declared promptly. "If you have any other reason than a sudden desire to enjoy my admirations without interruptions, I don't want to know it. I am jealous of my vanity." "Then you shall be flattered," she returned gaily. "I am in the mood for you. Someday there's got to be a battle between us, between you and me, Roddy. Let's have it now."

He was on his feet in an instant and standing over her. She stopped with her eyes, and held him half bent down to her. She did not stir, nor put up a hand; it was just the indescribable something in her eyes.

"No, not just now," she said, her lips shaping into the utmost of their provocativeness. "You mustn't be too literal. But to-night, perhaps, or tomorrow night—or when the moment arrives. But as soon as we can. I want to know how I'm coming off."

"Damn you! Are you playing with me?" "No, Roddy, I've never played. Not since my money came. Someday I want to play. After we've had our battle, perhaps. What shall we do first? Let's go through the mist—to some place. Why not up La Turbie?"

"Tonight? That's what I must hurry home to change for. I shall want to look very alluring." He straightened and looked down at her coolly for a moment. She did not flinch under his gaze, nor did her lips uncurve. He turned away and looked out a window. It was already darkening outside, and the lights of Monte Carlo were vague pin points.

"If we drive carefully we can make it," he concluded. "I'll take the wheel myself. You won't be afraid to trust yourself with me, shall you?"

"That's what I want to find out, Roddy. So many people are skeptical of me, I want to know if they're right—or wrong."

He laughed. "I shan't ask you to stay beyond the hour," he declared. "I'll need some time alone to try and figure you out. What's happened? Something has, I am certain."

"Nothing," she assured him. "Nothing, that is, that wasn't expected."

A servant notified them that Mademoiselle's mount had been brought to the door before either of them realized that the hour had flown. She had induced Kenilworth to tell her some of the histories of the souvenirs which were strewn about the room in which their tea had been served, and she was enthusiastic about them.

When she went out to her horse she found that the groom also had brought a mount. Kenilworth nodded his approval. Joanna begged to be allowed to ride back to Amette alone, declaring her faith in the lights along the sea boulevard and her horse's instinct, but Kenilworth was firm.

"I should take you along myself," he explained, "but I shall want a look at the car. It's a stiff climb to La Turbie. I always want to be satisfied about my brakes."

At Villa Amette, Joanna found Brandon awaiting her. "I have invited myself to dine," he explained, "and no one seems to object. Perhaps you will go along for an hour or two at the Casino, afterwards. There won't be a crowd, and we can drop in for an act at the theater. Yvonne seems to have other plans for the evening."

"And so have I," she told him. "I'm going up La Turbie with Roddy. He's often wanted me to go up with him, and now I've promised."

"Sorry," she did not wait for the inevitable protest against climbing the narrow, winding road that ventured up the steep La Turbie mountain to the isolated resort above La Turbie village, but tripped on up the stairs. Brandon looked after her. Even women who were careless seldom went up La Turbie to dine or dance at the famous roadhouse atop the hill, unless in groups. The sayest of the hidden rendezvous along the coast. It was, in some respects, also the most forbidding. One always went up La Turbie but one did not, customarily, talk about it. After he had stood for a time in deep reflection, Brandon went onto the Amette veranda and peered out into the damp fog. Accustomed as he was to the Riviera he estimated the feel of it to his nostrils and his fingers. He appeared to gain, from his conclusions, some definite satisfaction.

He summoned a servant and inquired if Mademoiselle Countess was still occupied in her boudoir. The maid reported that her mistress was, and would not be down for some little time. "You may tell her," he ordered, "that I shall not be staying to dine, if she won't mind."

A half hour later, when he had dismissed the Amette car which had taken him back to Monte Carlo, Brandon summoned his valet and demanded that a suit of heavy tweeds be laid out for him. When the man had complied his master ordered:

"Go at once to the garage of the Italian in the Boulevard du Midi and ask for Antoine. If he is not at hand find out where he can be reached immediately. When you have him say that I want him to drive me as soon as he can be ready up the mountain. If he objects to the mist, tell him the thicker the fog the heavier his purse will be. Be sure, however, that it is Antoine himself you find. Otherwise return quickly."

On her way to her own boudoir, Joanna stopped at Yvonne's. She, too, it seemed, was particularly painstaking at her evening's toilette. Her maids were flushed and nervous under the temper of their mistress. That they were having difficulties in pleasing her was evident from the litter of glittering gowns angrily tossed into heaps on the chaise longue, chairs and, even, tables. For a brief instant Joanna stood in the boudoir door, beneath the curtains that shut off Yvonne's sitting room; just long enough for her eyes to harden and narrow. Then she announced brightly that she would be going out with Kenilworth and that she hoped her running away would not interfere with any plans for the evening Yvonne might have made.

Yvonne glanced at her sharply. She concluded, however, that there had been nothing hidden in Joanna's tone. "I have no other plans than a run into the Casino, perhaps," she said. "Betty Weymouth is having something or other to-night at her place, and I did promise that you and I would drop in, but that is not important. If you are running away by yourself I shan't trouble."

Joanna went over to the other woman and, stooping, lightly brushed her cheek with her lips. "Then I shan't be seeing you till tomorrow sometime. It will be early, though, for I shan't be able to sleep with tomorrow night so close." She stopped again at the door as she went out, to say, as if it were an afterthought: "To-night I'm going up La Turbie—with Roddy. It will be great fun on the mountain tonight."

Yvonne turned quickly, but the girl had dropped the curtains behind her. She waved both of her maids away, when they bore down upon her with Joanna's departure, and sat quietly in a study. Presently she looked up and into the mirror before her. She examined the reflection she saw there with an intent, abstract scrutiny.

From her face her gaze wandered to her throat, around which hung her most magnificent pearls, and then to her gown—she had chosen a thing of pink in orchid hues that had come that day from her Paris couturier's. She shook her head, in response to her mental conclusions upon the ensemble the mirror reflected.

"You may take off the pearls," she commanded a maid, "and bring me diamonds. A lot of them. And I shall not wear this gown after all. It's too innocuous. I've something in burgundy; bring that." As if to herself she added, in a murmur that neither maid could overhear:

"Burgundy and diamonds. If I'm not mistaken that will do the trick."

CHAPTER XXXI

The Challenge

Two cars crept upwards along the tortuous road that climbed the mountain. Kenilworth's red roadster, with its master at the wheel and Joanna settled snugly beside him in the single seat, glided silently from the streets of Monte Carlo, into the shrub-lined avenue that narrowed gradually until it became barely more than a path sloping sharply toward the summit of the hill. Ahead of them Brandon, muffled in tweeds covered by a black domino, sat beside an evil, heavy-jowled Monegasque who steered a much larger car than Kenilworth's. The purple mist, hued vaguely now that the twilight had gone, blotted out the lights of town and villa which, on moonlight nights, make this road up La Turbie one of the beautiful drives of Europe.

"One who climbs the hill to-night, Master, must have a steady nerve and a purpose," said the Monegasque who guided the car in which Brandon rode.

"If the purpose is worthy of the nerve, the effort is worth while," Brandon returned. "One man's object is a woman, another's may be sold. I imagine your nerve would not fail you in either case."

When Antoine had made a turn with a sureness and a knowledge of the bank which stamped him as familiar with the road he followed, he observed:

"There are few women in your world, Master, for whom I'd take myself or my men into danger. Your women are playthings. That's why we don't let our mistresses tempt them."

shooting commenced," was the only explanation West would make when queried concerning the motive for the shooting. He had let the story slip in a weak moment, and then regretfully became silent.

West confessed that he had sawed off the barrel of the shotgun which was found near the scene of the shooting. It had been used in the battle, he said, by the members of the quintet who had been wounded. He had "fixed" this gun several days ago, he said. CITY OF ALBANY

A Great Year ~ A Great Car ~ and Lower Prices

1925 was the greatest year in Dodge Brothers history.

More than a quarter of a million Dodge Brothers Motor Cars were built and sold, yet demand was far in excess of production—and continues to mount.

To meet this world-wide need for a smart and dependable motor car, Dodge Brothers, Inc. have recently completed a $10,000,000 program of expansion, vastly increasing production and lowering the cost of manufacture.

Remarkable new machine equipment has also been installed—further reducing costs and perfecting quality.

As a result Dodge Brothers, Inc. were enabled on January 7th, to announce a schedule of prices that has revolutionized all previous standards of motor car value.

Prices all the more impressive because they apply to a dependable and trusted product made still better in many vital respects—

Engine operation incredibly smooth and quiet.

Instant engine response and elasticity.

Stylish new bodies finished in rich and distinctive colors.

Exceptional driving vision.

And the most important advance in steel body construction since Dodge Brothers pioneered in building the first all-steel body.

Prof. J. C. Tidwell, superintendent of schools for Morgan county, is today inspecting the schools of Decatur and New Decatur.

Miss Kathleen Blair won the popularity contest of the United Amusement company with a vote of 36,256. Miss Mary Price was second and Miss Margaret Frahn, third.

Mrs. D. W. Speake delightfully entertained at her home on the Somerville pike Sunday, in honor of Mr. Speake's birthday.

Mrs. Mamie Maulsby has returned from a visit to her sons in Selma and Birmingham.

Helen Wills, American tennis champion had the courage to try, yet there are some who will sit back in gloom and see "I told you so." The world is famed for some characters who desire to see leaders lose.

George Edwards, who went to church to pick pockets and not to worship, evidently is one man in the world who believes in taking advantage of opportunity when a knocking is heard.

Gerald Chapman is a doomed man, says a news report. Now we wonder if they'll be good to him and hang him, rather than keeping him bothered with legal controversies for the next quarter century?

Speaking of sensations, we are prone to believe that this section of the world is not so far behind the rest of the nation. This is one phase of every day life in which we would not like to keep abreast of the times. The Pulaski robbery and murder case stands with the best of the larger cities for daring, cunning, and lack of clues.

A PLEASURE TO WORK UNDER SUCH AN OFFICIAL

Inasmuch as lawyering and laws is occupying the center of the local stage at this time, the writer does not feel it amiss to discuss the routine of the circuit court now in session with Judge Osceola Kyle presiding. It proves a positive pleasure to work under a man who has a regard for duty, is efficient, prompt and demands respect of all in the courtroom, including attorneys. Judge Kyle has been grinding away for the past two weeks in the present term of the circuit court and the minutes lost in actual working have been few. He has been on the dot himself, ready for work and he has expected of every man the fulfillment of the same obligation in running the government of the land. Some have stated that Judge Kyle is entirely too authoritative when he is seated on the bench, we take the position that if he were not reminding others of his jurisdiction that sooner or later the matter of business in the court sessions would be regarded as secondary.

CITIZEN DESIRES ACTION ON BEAUTIFICATION OF LAWN

Yesterday a citizen walked into The Daily office and said to the writer, "Seems to me if you are a good editor, you will lend your influence to seeing that the north side of the courthouse lawn is looked after." He described the lawn as being unkempt and unworthy of the spacious structure of justice now resting on a portion of the plot. Believing that the best way to serve the people is in investigation and looking into the facts, the writer journeyed to the north side of the court lawn and for a moment was at a loss as to the name of the alley on which he had just looked. Court is in session at this time and all officials, employees and janitors are very busy with court routine, but The Daily offers the suggestion that upon the conclusion of the busy season that something be done to remove the unsightly appearance of the lawn. The courthouse can be made attractive on the exterior if not in the interior. We suggest that with the coming of spring that the lawn be kept cut close, the iron fence removed, taking the idea that once in the yard you are in a fair way to be in jail, away. True, the iron fence lends local color, but people are not particularly interested in that sort of local color. It will probably prove difficult to make the lawn on the northeast side of the edifice a carpet of green, owing to the heavy shade trees and the practice of loading coal into the east side, but something can be done to make the surroundings a little more inviting. While the reconstruction period is underway, we suggest that another visit to the town clock be made, it's running nicely at the present time, but you never can tell.

A MISCONCEPTION OF THE MANUFACTURE OF A NEWSPAPER

Thirty years ago, perhaps, the public was quite able to look into the dingy office of a newspaper plant and gain a knowledge of the workings necessary for the manufacture of the paper. Today, such is hardly true. The average man or woman might go through a newspaper plant and upon emerging be unable to tell what this department and the other department meant. However, people, as a reading class, are beginning to learn something of the meaning of the newspaper business.

Editors have rapidly pulled away from personal fights and have turned their pens to constructiveness, city building, moral building. It is as much a part of the editor of today as the purchase of seasonal merchandise is to the merchant. The editor who allows his column to go before the public eye day after day with very little mention of things that are of worth will soon find that the public is reading his utterances not through interest, but through a growing viewpoint of animosity that must sooner or later find an outlet.

Editors are conducting newspapers on the same basis as other businesses are conducted. News stories are played to best advantage just as good merchandise is placed in the window, or advertised, to sell. Poor stories are relegated to give way to the more important events and crime is not always listed as a major portion of the day's news. Crime is often found on the inside pages, with news of building, news of organizations on the front page of the paper. In most cases the sensational news is a thing of the past, that is, so-called sensational news is nothing more or less than cold facts compiled in an interesting way that attracts the eye of the reader, breaks off the front page into the advertising sections and runs alongside an advertisement, giving an additional advantage to the advertiser. Charges that newspapermen are concocting sensational stories are entirely out of reason. A sensational story must contain the facts and unless the facts are contained then the story is not published.

The public knows the danger as well as the advantage of printers ink, that is why the public does not fear the press when authentic accounts are printed in which that particular person is mentioned. Newspapers have always been one of the nation's most constructive forces, they will continue to be so. Ask the leaders of your churches, your schools, your drives, your campaigns, your law enforcers. If they do not count heavily upon the newspaper as an agent, you may obtain a keener insight into the everyday duties of the newspaper man.

SUPPOSE WE EX-END AN INVITATION TO BRISBANE

Tuesday The Daily editorial columns asked that Arthur Brisbane, famed editorial writer, come to North Alabama. He wished to see something greater than California or Florida or any other portion of our great nation. Today The Daily extends an invitation to the writer to come into this section.

It cannot be doubted for a moment what Brisbane would say of this section. His views would be odd, that is the man, that is where he makes his living, in being different from other people and other writers, but his views expressed through his daily column would prove a tremendous advertisement for this section as it is read in every territory in the United States. If Brisbane liked and believed in this section his followers would become converts, if he disliked this section his followers would declare him a radical. Southerners would scoff at his opinion, declaring him a dyed-in-the-wool Republican not in sympathy with Southern development. Public opinion fluctuates and people like to see what they wish to read.

However, in extending this invitation to Mr. Brisbane we suggest that upon his arrival here, of course we take a great deal for granted, that a palatial and luxurious automobile be provided, even then it might not be safe to take him over Second Avenue for the poor impression of city builders he might obtain. By all means keep him away from Echols Hill, he might aim a blow at the state highway department. Explain to him, when he asks the way to the Shoals, that the contract has been let for the Courtland-Decatur road and at the present time the highway is under construction. Do not mention a lack of taxi system if he chances to notice a few cars stalled in the middle of the street, with drivers half a block away raging because traffic has been blocked. That's the "don'ts" part.

Now for the "ayes." Tell Mr. Brisbane what is in your heart for your section. Not a lot of bombast about a seventy-five mile city to be built in 30 minutes, but of three transportation systems, the hospital drive that went across in a nine day whirlwind campaign, the nearly completed river bridge. In other words, deal in futures, but not too heavily, you may be caught on the downgrade and such would be extremely embarrassing to the host and the guest.

The Daily is inviting Mr. Brisbane to come here and to visit the entire Shoals section, it will do him good and will do us some good, perhaps he can prevail on the national congress to get in a hurry for once, regarding a settlement from Washington. We can hear the "ayes" from the Tri-Cities and the Huntsville district already. His visit will prove interesting to his many readers here and we believe he will be repaid with a knowledge gained on the actual ground in the section that has held the main entrance to the Senate show for a number of years.

SECRETARY OF LABOR DAVIS announces the coal strike ending. The workers get about what was to be expected.

Intelligent leadership was on the other side. After losing millions a week in wages for months many of them hungry and all worried the men return to work with no increase in pay and a contract to keep on working for five years.

The mine owners have not worried. Their coal has stayed in the ground quite safe they sold huge surplus supplies including mountains of coal dust at high prices.

It is hard for working men to get the right leadership. They can't afford to pay, or won't pay, for it, what the owners will pay.

GREAT RELIEF in Japan, for Seijiro Onishi, first Japanese "Gunman" is locked up.

Japanese criminals use daggers everybody there has a horror of pistols. Onishi, gun-toter, robbed many, killed a few. But will not last long now.

HERE we have our thousands of active highly efficient gunmen. Worth only a few lines in the news. Japanese newspapers publish special extras for Onishi the first Japanese crime extras.

They won't send Onishi flowers or give him two or three different trials. He won't be locked in a prison with moving pictures games and other delights. He will see a dead Onishi. The Japanese are practical.

MUSOLINI according to international news has gone to Milan where Doctor Baldo Rossi will operate on him. The result will be awaited with interest in Germany, England, France, Greece and other countries whose national noses Mussolini has pulled frequently.

In Italy the operation causes intense anxiety. Unfortunately there is in Mussolini's condition, a basis for anxiety. He knows it and has made his plans accordingly.

NEW ORLEANS BIDS FAREWELL TO FLESHMardi Gras This Year
Well Up To Past
Standards

(Associated Press)

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 17.—New Orleans Tuesday bade farewell to flesh for forty days when the carnival of Mardi Gras reached its climax. Carnivals have been celebrated here for nearly a century, the final fling before Lent being an institution brought from ancient Paris. In its New Orleans observance it follows closely its Latin derivation. Carne Vale, (farewell to the flesh.) Organized carnivals, culminating with Mardi Gras (fat Tuesday) date from 1872.

The carnival ending last night lacked but one glory of former years, Rex, who this year was Joseph P. Henican landed to assume command of his court with less ostentation than was the case a decade ago. Tuesday he emerged from his den, where the carnival floats are built, to lead his parade at noon. Time was when he landed from the royal yacht amid a din of shrieking sirens and salutes from scores of military organizations led by the far famed Washington artillery.

One touch of the yesterday remained. The old river packets as usual brought hundreds of visitors.

Mardi Gras however, save in its reception to the king at the river front was the Mardi Gras of other days with added emphasis. Masking permitted for this day only, under the law was in vogue from the prescribed sunrise to sunset.

The pageants of Rex at noon and Comus, Roman god of joy and mirth at night brought to the streets floats which have been a year in building. Costly costumes for the final balls were the rule rather than the exception, and the garb of the masked street dancers ran the range of surprising originality.

The day began at dawn with subjects of Rex on the streets to prepare the welcome for the king at noon. Scores of carnival societies, drove about the city on trucks, the members masked and in costume, and carrying food and drink with them. Many had their own music on board and others stopped to dance as contact was established with a band.

It is the aim of the shop committee to sign up every worker for a donation of twenty-five cents weekly. The total would mean positive, and overwhelming success to the campaign and the predominance of the shop, the heart of the town, in the community achievement.

No Checks Returned

Persistent rumors to the effect that campaign workers have returned checks to donors are emphatically denied by the hospital campaign directors. It is not the policy of the hospital trustees to alienate the friendship of a single individual. Workers have been instructed to be as courteous as possible in bringing their appeal before the public.

They have been asked to be appreciative of every donation made. The campaign will not be considered a success if individuals are left with the belief that the hospital has asked more of any individual than what is his share in this $60,000 venture. The public is asked to be considerate, and not to jeopardize the happy consummation of this most worthy attempt because of the tactlessness of individuals.

Mrs. Britnell Dies At Russellville

Mrs. B. F. Britnell, beloved woman of Russellville, died Monday evening at eight o'clock at her home, there concluding a life of usefulness. The deceased is survived by her husband, three sons and three daughters:

Mrs. W. M. Chenault, of Albany; Mrs. R. E. Wardlow of Albany; Mrs. A. C. Vaughn of Russellville; C. T. Britnell of Russellville; A. T. Britnell of Huntsville and R. E. Britnell of Birmingham.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist, Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

Gas Pains Vanished When He Began Taking Herb Juice

Sour and Bloating Stomach Yields to Healing Powers of HERB JUICE—Machinist Restored to Health.

"Can I recommend HERB JUICE? Well, I should say I can. It has proven to be the greatest medicine I ever used, and I see no excuse for people suffering with stomach trouble and constipation now that they are able to obtain this medicine" said Mr. N. R. Davis machinist for Todd Dry Dock Company who resides at 835 South Warren street Mobile, Ala. Mr. Davis is very enthusiastic over his improved condition as a result of using HERB JUICE and when he told of his condition before taking it, he had this to say: "The greater part of my life I have been a victim of stomach trouble and constipation. Of course these ailments bothering me so much I got in a very run down condition. I would have the most suffocating pains in my stomach after eating and this caused me so much trouble at night that it was just impossible to get the necessary rest and sleep for a working man. As a result of this would only drag through the day trying to keep up my work. I had no energy and never felt like doing anything. But the great relief HERB JUICE brought me was very gratifying indeed. Today I feel 100 per cent better, have a good appetite, plenty of energy and have gained considerably in weight. The best part of all is my stomach is now in good shape, the gas pains and bloating have stopped and I just eat the food I want and properly digest it. I have no trace of constipation bowels and liver acting splendidly. As soon as I started taking HERB JUICE the gas pains and bloating spells vanished and now I can do a day's work with ease. I am very grateful for the great relief HERB JUICE has brought me and I am glad to speak a good word for it to any one needing a good laxative and system regulator."

This wonderful remedy which is now outselling all other medicines. HERB JUICE is being sold by Cadell Drug Co., and leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.

ECZEMA

Dries right up!

If you just realized how easy it is to stop itchy, itching, burning eczema by simply building up the red-blood-cells in your blood with S. S. S., you wouldn't waste another minute trying to do it any other way.

That's the only way to relieve irritated, broken out skin of any sort. You lack rich, red blood. Impurities are in your system. The blood is so weak it can't fight back and overcome the enemy, so the impurities break out through the skin.

S. S. S. builds the blood back—builds millions of new red-blood-cells. Eczema dries right up. Bolls, pimples, blackheads, ugly blotches and irritating rashes all disappear.

Clear up your skin. Get S. S. S. All druggists sell it. The larger bottle is more economical.

FARMER ADMITS HE SLEW HIS FIANCE

Killing Occurred Only Two Hours Before Wedding Time

(Associated Press)

WEWOKA, Okla., Feb. 17—Erman Higdon, 22 year old farmer boy, has confessed he shot and killed his 17 year old sweetheart, Rita May Gosa, two hours before they were to have been married Sunday.

Erman signed a detailed statement admitting the shooting, late yesterday after murder charges had been filed against him. He faces death in the electric chair or life imprisonment under the murder charge.

The killing followed the girl's admission that she anticipated motherhood, the confession said.

SPORTS

Helen Wills May Get Another Chance At The Reigning Suzanne Before Long

Helen Wills, 20 year old Californian holder of the American Woman's Tennis champion wept down in defeat Tuesday before the terrific onslaught of Suzanne Lenglen, colorful woman champion of the world. America's youthful Helen was defeated in straight sets, 6-3, 8-6, extending Suzanne to the limit in the last set.

It is so very seldom that an American bows to any other nation that the world gaps in awe when sport pages reveal that an American has been beaten. That's what happened on Tuesday and the folks on this side of the water predicted immediately that Helen Wills will come back against the French woman and do away with all old scores.

Even as far away from tennis interests as Albany-Decatur interest in the international tilt was evinced and the prediction made that Helen Wills will sooner or later wear the crown, wresting it from the hands of the mighty Suzanne.

Some spoke of the sting that was added to the defeat seeing that Suzanne carried Miss Wills to the heights and then dropped her with a dull thud. Americans still remember the colorful Suzanne's default against Molla Mallory, the then American champion. Suzanne at that time pleaded illness and left the court. Miss Wills was suffering with a gashed knee as she played Suzanne Tuesday and she did not ask that the French champion give any quarter she was a characteristic American before an international audience.

Before many years pass Miss Wills will be crowned champion in tennis ranks just as other American's usurp world thrones. This country seems to produce leaders in all lines of athletics, the American is not to be denied supremacy in athletic contests. Miss Wills is coming back.

How Skinny Kids Gain Weight and Strength

Everyone knows that Cod Liver Oil is a full of vitamins, is a flesh builder supreme. In children where rickets are suspected it even helps to build up the bones and strengthens the body.

But let us all be glad! the poor under weight, sickly, puny kids doesn't have to take the vile, nasty, oil itself any more for thanks to science McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets has taken its place.

Sugar coated they are and as easy to take as candy and if you will give them to your sickly child for thirty days, you'll be very happy indeed.

If you are not, Cadell Drug Co., or the druggist from whom you bought them is authorized to return your money. 60 tablets, 60 cents—but be sure and get McCoy's, the original and genuine.—
